Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

College basketball coach Ricardo Maurice Patton was born on October 23, 1958 in Nashville, Tennessee to Juanita Patton and Leroy Reed. After his 1976 graduation from Nashville's Hume Fogg High School, where he lettered in basketball, Patton attended Belmont College in his hometown and studied physical education. He earned two athletic letters and was named a small college All-American during his senior year, paving the way for his induction into Belmont's Sports Hall of Fame. Patton earned his bachelor's degree in 1980 and went to work as a studio cameraman at Nashville's CBS affiliate, WTVF-TV. In 1985, his passion for sports began to blossom into a career when he accepted a coaching position at Two Rivers Middle School and Hillwood High School, both in Nashville.

Moving into the arena of college basketball, Patton served as assistant coach for Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro, Tennessee for two seasons between 1988 and 1990. He obtained an M.A. in Administration and Supervision from Trevecca Nazarene College in 1989. In 1990, Patton accepted a post as assistant coach at Arkansas-Little Rock University, but returned to Tennessee in 1991 to assist head coach Frankie Allen at Tennessee State University. Patton achieved the title of head coach at the University of Colorado in 1996. In his first season, he led the Golden Buffaloes to win 22 games - their most wins ever - resulting in their first NCAA Tournament since 1969. The team has continued to play extremely well under his direction, and the recognition Patton earned gained him the title of head coach for the 2000 Big 12 All-Star Team during a tour of Austria. However, Patton prizes good character and determination above basketball skills. To encourage these qualities, he requires his team to take an etiquette class prior to each season.

Patton golfs avidly and holds a fifth-degree black belt in Tae Kwan Do. He is a member of the National Association of Basketball Coaches. Patton and wife Jennifer have two sons, Ricardo, Jr. and Michael.

Ricardo Patton talks about his family history. Patton was born on October 23, 1958 in Nashville, Tennessee to Juanita Patton and Leroy Reed. When Patton was nine months old, his mother left him and his sister to be raised by their paternal grandmother, August Reed. Patton met his mother for the first time in 1981. Patton's father was the disciplinarian but was not otherwise involved in his life. Patton went to Glen Elementary School where teachers encouraged him to do well in school. Patton attended the Pilgrim Emmanuel Baptist Church in Nashville, Tennessee and made a pact with God that he would not use drugs if he could have a successful basketball career. Growing up in poverty, Patton felt sad during meager holidays and constantly thought about how he could improve his life.

Ricardo Patton talks about his experiences in high school and his college athletic career. A 1978 graduate of Hume Fogg High School in Nashville, Tennessee, Patton lettered in basketball and earned his black belt in taekwondo. Patton took the advice of his mentors to change his negative attitude and instead embrace the principles of hard work and self-improvement. Patton attended John C. Calhoun Community College in DeCatur, Alabama for two years before being recruited by Belmont College's basketball coach, Don Purdy. Despite a disagreement with the coach during his senior year that led to him briefly quitting the team, Patton had a successful basketball career at Belmont College in Nashville, Tennessee and was named a small college All-American.

Ricardo Patton describes his time as the head basketball coach at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Patton faced challenges recruiting players because the program does not have a tradition of winning championships. Additionally, injuries, harsh media critiques, and losing talented players like Chauncey Billups to the NBA created additional struggles. Despite the obstacles, Patton enjoys mentoring his players and wants to be remembered for his determination and helping others. While he knows that his children cannot relate to his own childhood struggles, Patton wants to instill the value of giving to his two sons. Patton concludes by narrating his photographs.
