Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

Actress T’Keyah Crystal Keymah was born in Chicago, Illinois, on October 13, 1962. By the age of three, Keymah was singing and dancing, and in high school she joined the Mary Wong Comedy Group. After high school, Keymah attended Florida A & M University’s School of Business and Industry.

While attending Florida A & M, Keymah began teaching theater, dance, and pantomime. Upon graduation, she returned to her native Chicago, where she worked as a substitute teacher while performing at some of the city’s most renowned theaters, including ETA and the Goodman. Keymáh first broke onto the television scene with a role on Quantum Leap in 1989; the following year, she joined the cast of In Living Color. During Keymáh's five years with In Living Color, she was nominated for an NAACP Image Award and a Soul Train Comedy Award. Over the next several years, Keymáh was a cast member in a number of other television shows, including On Our Own, Waynehead, The Show, and, most notably, as Bill Cosby’s daughter on Cosby. Keymáh also had roles on Roc, The Commish, and The John Larroquette Show, as well as doing voice-over work on Batman Beyond and Pinky and the Brain. Keymáh also made several movie appearances, including Jackie Brown and The Gilded Six Bit.

Keymáh went on to do a variety show, T’Keyah Live!… Mostly: A True Variety Show, which received rave reviews; she also appeared on the Disney Channel’s highly rated program, That’s So Raven. Keymáh produced the acclaimed short film Circle of Pain and was the executive producer of One Last Time.

In addition to her acting and producing, Keymáh is the author of Natural Woman / Natural Hair: Hairstyles and Hairstories From the Front; she also co-hosted the national ACT-SO awards, and the Orange and Aloha Bowl parades. Keymáh's alma mater, Florida A & M, has given her their second highest honor, the Meritorious Award; she is also listed among their 100 most influential FAMUans of the Century.

Video Oral History Interview with T'Keyah Crystal Keymah, Section A2004_194_001_001, TRT: 0:30:49 2004/10/06

T’Keyah Crystal Keymah was born Crystal Walker on October 13, 1962 to Arlene Carter and William Walker, Sr. Her mother, who was educated as a teacher at Chicago State University in Chicago, Illinois, died when Keymah was two years old. Keymah was raised by her maternal grandparents, Mary Louis Zeno and Carneil Carter. Her maternal great-great-grandmother was a slave who worked as a cook after emancipation. Keymah’s great-grandparents, Arista and Mintha Zeno were well-to-do Creoles who were forced out of Louisiana by the Ku Klux Klan. In 1919, they settled in Chicago, Illinois during the Chicago riots and disowned their Creole roots. Arista became a stockyard worker and money lender, and Mintha worked as a domestic and seamstress. In 1986, Keymah changed her name from Crystal Walker to T’Keyah Crystal Keymah to sever any connection with her ancestors’ slave masters. Her names, which are of Hebrew origin and symbolic of resurrection, were inspired by Ben Ammi’s book “God, the Black Man, and Truth.”

African American television personalities--Interviews.
T'Keyah Crystal Keymah was raised by her maternal grandparents, Mary Louise Zeno and Carneil Carter, after her mother’s death. Her grandfather was an accountant and also an insurance salesman at Metropolitan Insurance. Keymah’s grandmother worked in sales until she was hired as a caseworker by the Illinois Department of Public Aid. Keymah’s father, William Walker, Sr., an Illinois State Trooper, was born in Springfield, Illinois and was of Cherokee or Seminole Indian descent. Keymah’s paternal ancestors owned Walker farm in Springfield, a safe house in the Underground Railroad. Keymah and her father had an estranged relationship. She shares her earliest childhood memories as well as the sights, sounds, and smells of her childhood in Auburn Gresham, one of many segregated neighborhoods in Chicago, Illinois where she attended St. Sabina Academy. Keymah recalls her childhood personality and the love of drama she developed the summer before entering Academy of Our Lady High School in 1980.

T'Keyah Crystal Keymah credits her ease with the elderly to her close relationships with her grandparents and their friends who all played an influential role in her life. Keymah also benefitted from the instruction of many great teachers including her kindergarten teacher who introduced her to art; her elementary music teacher who taught her composition; and her third grade teacher who encouraged Keymah to write her first play. As a young girl, Keymah enjoyed watching TV programs like “Mary Poppins,” “Cleopatra,” and the “Bill Cosby Show,” and remembers beautiful black actresses like Lola Falana and HistoryMaker Diahann Carroll. She joined the mime troupe as a high school student at the Academy of Our Lady in Chicago, Illinois, which she credits for shaping her future as a performer. Although Keymah’s family was not politically active, she remembers the reverence her grandparents and their peers held for Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.
T'Keyah Crystal Keymah attended St. Sabina Academy in Chicago, Illinois before enrolling at Academy of Our Lady High School in Chicago where she graduated in 1980. Academy of Our Lady was a predominately black all-girls high school operated by older white nuns. As a youth, Keymah found various performance outlets for her talents, not only with her family, but also as a cheerleader, in choir, and participating in a mime troupe. She commuted to school using public transportation. Although she had good grades, she did not work hard academically. Instead she enjoyed the attention she received from her peers after performing in her first talent show and discovered her affinity for improv during a production of “Godspell.”

T'Keyah Crystal Keymah documented her family tree for the history fair as a student at the Academy of Our Lady High School in Chicago, Illinois. As a youth, she challenged and then disowned the Catholic faith. After reading Toni Morrison’s “Song of Solomon,” Keymah started to identify strongly with her black heritage. She founded a club named Rafiki, the Kiswahili counterpart for her grandmother’s club Les Ritz a Fin and her mother’s club, Les Chers Amis. Keymah also ran unsuccessfully for senior class president. Her theater focus in high school brought her into contact with memorable performers at Academy of Our Lady like Cathy Williams who danced with the Najwa Junior Dance Corps and played the role of Jesus in a statewide production of “Jesus Christ Superstar.” Keymah graduated from high school in 1980 and attended Florida A&M University in Tallahassee, Florida. At a recruiter’s suggestion, Keymah majored in business to satisfy her grandmother. However, she knew that she also wanted to become an actress.

T'Keyah Crystal Keymah recalls choosing Florida A&M University (FAMU) in Tallahassee, Florida over the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign for its beaches and palm trees. However, her first impressions upon arriving at FAMU were far removed from her arriving at FAMU were far removed from her expectations. Nonetheless, Keymah made good friends, participated in the freshman talent show, joined the university’s dance company, and also co-founded a dance theater group with her friends in which she was an understudy for the role of Dorothy in “The Wiz.” Initially a business major, Keymah switched over to theater after her freshman year. FAMU’s struggling theater program was headed by Dr. Ronald Davis and Keymah created a box office system for the theater. She was also cast in a different production of “The Wiz” as well as “Moon on a Rainbow Shawl.” Keymah also remembers her exposure to black shows like “Your Arms Are Too Short to Box With God” in high school and her rejection of the category of “black theater.”

T’Keyah Crystal Keymah reflects upon the impact of reading Ntozake Shange’s “For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide” as a high school student. At Florida A&M University in Tallahassee, Florida, her favorite instructor was Dr. Theodore Hemingway. During her senior year, Keymah, took several courses at Florida State University in Tallahassee. She also won the National Miss Black and Gold Pageant in 1984 using a routine of singing impressions. After graduation, Keymah returned to Chicago, Illinois in search of an acting job. Encouraged by a fraternity brother, she competed in the Miss Black America Pageant and became Miss Black Illinois in 1985, learning a great deal about the world of competitive pageants. Her pageant sponsor helped Keymah secure an audition and a role in the eta’s production of “The Regal Theater,” kicking off her theatrical career in Chicago. She then joined the Najwa Dance Corps, performed in “A Christmas Carol” at the Goodman Theatre, and received her Screen Actors Guild (SAG) card.

T’Keyah Crystal Keymah received her Screen Actors Guild (SAG) card while working as a stunt double on the film “Big Shots.” Her television career began after she was cast by Robi Reed for Keenan Ivory Wayans’ “In Living Color.” Keymah traces her television career from “In Living Color” to “On Our Own,” “The Show,” “Cosby,” and finally, “That’s So Raven.” Keymah is well-known for “In Black World,” her signature sketch on “In Living Color” which addressed inequity from the perspective of a little girl. She recalls the strain of making sure the show was “palatable” for network TV as well as other challenges on the set of “In Living Color” like fighting for writing credit and for her name change to appear. While filming “In Living Color”, she remained active in the theater world since she was not actively cast in the show. During this time, she completed her play “Some of My Best Friends” which highlighted the voices of people neglected by society like poets, teenage black boys, and elders.

T’Keyah Crystal Keymah describes the varied responses she received to her book, “Natural Woman/Natural Hair: A Hair Journey” which was published in 2003. A recent project, “In Black World,” expands upon Keymah’s signature piece on the show “In Living Color.” She also talks about her hopes and concerns for the African American community and what she would do differently in retrospect. Throughout her adult career, Keymah has enjoyed the support of her family members. She reflects upon her legacy and how she would like to be remembered.
