Dina Ruth Andrews was born on February 28, 1959 in Los Angeles, California. Her mother, Vera Olivia Jackson Andrews, was born on October 8, 1935 in Senatobia, Mississippi. Andrews’ grandmother died while in labor, and Vera Andrews was raised by her grandfather and her aunt, Katheryn Johnson. Johnson, whom Andrews thinks of as a grandmother, was born in 1919. Andrews was raised in South Central Los Angeles, California before moving to Valinda, California. When Andrews was fourteen, she learned that the man who raised her, Eugene Ellis Andrews, was not her biological father. Her biological father, Richard Cook, was from Orange, Texas. Andrews has two brothers, Mark Ellis Andrews and Arthur Casperson. Andrews describes how her mother’s death in 1998 steered her away from putting relatives in nursing homes. At the time of the interview, Andrews was living with Katheryn Johnson and her Aunt Dorothy. In 1983, tragedy hit Andrews’ family when two of her uncles died and her Aunt Lisa was killed by her husband.

Dina Ruth Andrews remembers the murder of her Aunt Lisa in 1983 and raising Aunt Lisa’s three daughters. She recalls her childhood in South Central Los Angeles, California, and the similarities between the Watts riots in 1965 and the Rodney King riots in 1992. Andrews’ mother, Vera Olivia Jackson Andrews, worked for the post office, but lost her job after she went blind. Andrews recalls the experience of growing up on food stamps and welfare and being teased for it. She attended Vermont Avenue Elementary School, Manchester Avenue Elementary School, and Bret Harte Preparatory Middle School in Los Angeles, California before moving with her great-aunt to Valinda, California in seventh grade, where she attended Grandview Middle School. She also attended William Workman High School in City of Industry, California. She recalls the deaths of the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and President John F. Kennedy and the culture shock of enrolling at a white school.

Dina Ruth Andrews reflects upon her mother’s blindness and moving to Valinda, California to live with her great-aunt after being involved in a fight. Within six months, her mother and brother also moved to Valinda from South Central Los Angeles, California. In 1975, Andrews graduated from William Workman High School in City of Industry, California and enrolled at California State University in Fullerton, California for two years before transferring to California State University in Los Angeles, California. In 1978, she joined SOLAR Records, where she worked with Dick Griffey, Clyde Wasson, and Cheryle Appling. Andrews shares the history of how Griffey formed SOLAR Records in 1977 and their artists, included The Whispers; Shalamar; Dynasty; Klymaxx; The Deele, and Midnight Star. In 1983, Griffey fired Andrews because she was independently managing HistoryMaker James “Jimmy Jam” Harris, III and Terry Lewis and their career had begun to take off under HistoryMaker Clarence Avant.
Dina Ruth Andrews left SOLAR Records in 1983 and began independently managing HistoryMaker James “Jimmy Jam” Harris, III and Terry Lewis. In 1984, Jimmy Jam and Terry moved back to Minnesota and Andrews moved to Valinda, California to live with her great-aunt, Katheryn Johnson. Andrews did some independent work for Keith Washington; Leon Sylvers, III; and Troy Johnson at Perry/Williams Entertainment before working as Burl Hechtman’s assistant at Motown Productions. In 1985, Andrews, Hechtman, and Suzanne de Passe launched the show “Nightlife,” and Andrews became West Coast Project Manager for Motown Productions. Andrews left Motown in 1987 and joined Cole Classic Management as an associate manager from 1988 to 1990. She also got a deal with Capitol Records, where she managed producer Derek Bramble. From 1992 to 1993, Andrews was the general manager for P.T. Entertainment in Atlanta, Georgia. During this time, she also worked with Alton “Wokie” Stewart and Alvin Speights.

Dina Ruth Andrews talks about working with Burl Hechtman and Suzanne de Passe at Motown Productions on “Nightlife” from 1985 until 1987. After working in television, Andrews returned to music by founding Dina Andrews Management, Inc. In 1994, Andrews began managing gospel songwriters, producers, and recording artists, including Percy Bady and the group Virtue. Andrews reflects on her experience working in the gospel music industry and looking for purpose within the entertainment industry. Andrews also reflects on the three most challenging moments she faced in her life: when she learned her father was not her biological father, when her uncles died and her Aunt Lisa was killed in 1983, and when her mother died and her marriage fell apart in 1998. She reflects on learning from her great-aunt how to overcome obstacles with faith. Andrews also shares her plans for a book and film about her short marriage and divorce titled “Confidence or Love,” about her husband’s criminal history.

Dina Ruth Andrews talks about living in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and New Mexico from 1996 to 1998, and managing Percy Bady and Virtue. Andrews describes the deal she made for Bady with Vicki Mack Lataillade at GospoCentric Records. In 1998, Andrews divorced her husband and returned to Valinda, California, where her mother was dying. She reflects on her mother’s death and what she learned from her marriage. Andrews talks about Knew Beginnings Entertainment, which she started around 1994 beginning the gospel side of her career. In 1998, Percy Bady left Andrews’ management and Andrews moved to Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Las Vegas as a minister until June 2000, when she returned to Atlanta, Georgia.

Dina Ruth Andrews returned to the music industry in 2000 as a consultant and traveled to Atlanta, Georgia and Boston, Massachusetts before returning to Las Vegas, Nevada, where she learned that her mother’s house was in foreclosure because of her brother. She returned to Los Angeles, California to reclaim the house. Andrews was hired by the clients she had visited in Atlanta and Boston, and she established Axiom Entertainment Group with Leroy Hampton, who she worked with for three years. In 2003, Andrews sold the house in California and moved to Atlanta, Georgia, where she started Knew Records. Andrews describes the difference between being a manager and being a consultant in the music industry, and the scarcity of black managers and women in the industry, including Benny Medina, Ramon Hervey, Stephanie Mills, Dolores Robinson, Hiriam Hicks, Tashia Stafford, Shiba Freeman Haley, and HistoryMaker Michael Mauldin.
