Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

Investment banker Ernesta G. Procope was born in Brooklyn, New York. During her early childhood, Procope studied piano and at age 13 appeared at Carnegie Hall showing early promise as a piano prodigy. By the time she had graduated high school in the 1940s, Procope’s interests had shifted from music to real estate and insurance. In 1953, she founded E.G. Bowman, a private insurance company that offered insurance to the residents of the predominantly African American Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn, New York.
Serving as president and chief executive officer, Procope made history in 1979 when she relocated her business from its Brooklyn storefront to 97 Wall Street. The E.G. Bowman Company became the first African American-owned business to be located on Wall Street. Procope became the broker of record for the New York City Housing Authority and the insurance broker for the construction of the United States’ portion of the Alaska Pipeline. Licensed in all 50 states, the company counts IBM, Avon Products, Philip Morris Companies, General Motors and Time Warner among its clients. Procope is also the founder and president of Bowman Specialty Services, LLP. This extension of her business provides engineering and safety services.

In 1972, Procope was honored in a White House ceremony where she received the Woman of the Year award from First Lady Patricia Nixon. She was appointed by President Gerald Ford as a Special Ambassador to Gambia and has served on many corporate and community non-profit boards, including The Chubb Corporation, Boys & Girls Clubs of America and the New York Urban League. In addition, she has been a Trustee for Cornell and Adelphi Universities and served as Chairperson of the Adelphi Board of Trustees.

Procope holds Honorary Doctor of Laws degrees from Howard University, Adelphi University and Marymount Manhattan College, as well as a Doctor of Humane Letters from Morgan State University. She has received numerous awards. In 1993, Ernst & Young named her Entrepreneur of the Year. In 2003, Ms. Procope was inducted into the African American Hall of Fame and in 2006, she was named to the Minority Business Hall of Fame and Museum.

Procope’s husband of 40 years, John Procope, is former advertising executive and publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, and a trustee of Howard University.

The Procopes reside in New York City.

The HistoryMakers® Video Oral History Interview with Ernesta G. Procope, Ernesta G. Procope was born in 1931 in Brooklyn, New York to Elvira Lord Forster and Clarence Forster. Her mother was born in St. Lucia, British West Indies to Edward Lord, the son of English pirate Sam Lord. Edward Lord died young, so Procope’s mother lived with her sisters and moved to Brooklyn at sixteen years old. Procope’s father was born in Barbados, but his father found him work with Cunard-White Star Line, Ltd. He progressed through the company’s ranks to become chief steward. Procope’s parents raised their four children in Bedford-Stuyvesant. Her mother was active in the Crispus Attucks Community Council and picketed F.W. Woolworth Company in the 1940s. Procope attended P.S. 3 school and studied piano at New York Schools of Music. At twelve years old, she performed at Carnegie Hall. She attended the School of Music and Arts for high school. She studied at Brooklyn College for one year before
She studied at Brooklyn College for one year before marrying her first husband, Albin Bowman, and she later married John Procope.

Video Oral History Interview with Ernesta G. Procope, Section A2006_091_001_001_002, TRT: 0:29:07 2006/06/13

Ernesta G. Procope met her first husband, Albin Bowman, in college and became insurance broker for his real estate business. After his death in 1952, Procope established an insurance business in the Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood of Brooklyn, New York. She met John Procope, an advertising executive and later publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, on a blind date arranged by her friend Virginia Carter. As her business expanded in the 1960s, Procope hired African American staff, and she explains the continuing importance of affirmative action. When insurance companies cancelled the policies of consumers in areas like Bedford-Stuyvesant, Procope met with Governor Nelson Rockefeller, and the New York legislature passed a law banning the practice of redlining. In the 1970s, she was named Tuesday magazine’s Woman of the Year. Procope moved her company to Wall Street in 1979 to attract more corporate clients. She also talks about educating young people about insurance, and her parents’ reaction to her success.

Video Oral History Interview with Ernesta G. Procope, Section A2006_091_001_003, TRT: 0:20:01 2006/06/13

Ernesta G. Procope’s commercial insurance brokerage, E.G. Bowman Company, Inc., was the first African American owned business on New York City’s Wall Street. Since she established an office there in 1979, many have joined her. She talks about the importance of forming a community of African American executives on Wall Street. Procope also reflects upon her career, accomplishments and the importance of history and education. She describes her hopes and concerns for Brooklyn’s Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood and for the broader African American community. Procope concludes her interview by narrating her photographs.
