Video Oral History Interview with Norma White, Section A2008_033_001_001, TRT: 0:28:49 2008/02/27

Norma White was born on November 17, 1934 in Jacksonville, Florida to Ruth Alma Cummings. She attended the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College for Negroes in Tallahassee, where she joined the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority (AKA). Upon earning her degree, White transferred to AKA’s graduate chapter, where she served as basileus, a role previously held by her mother. She also briefly served as regional director before returning to the position of basileus. White was appointed to the National Program Committee by AKA president Mattelia Grays; and, from that point on, continued to advance in the organization. During their tenures as supreme basileus, Bernice Sumlin and Mary Shy Scott encouraged White to run for the position, and she was successful in her second attempt. As supreme basileus, White focused on educational initiatives, including the ON TRACK program, which encouraged students to stay in school; and building schools in South Africa. White also describes her leadership style and vision for AKA.

Norma White was born on November 11, 1934 in Jacksonville, Florida to Ruth Alma Cummings. Her mother was born in Aiken, South Carolina in 1914, and moved at a young age to Jacksonville. There, White was raised by her mother and maternal grandparents, William Cummings, who was a minister and strict disciplinarian; and Lela Cummings, who enjoyed caring for her children and grandchildren. White’s mother was the oldest daughter of eight children, several of whom were close in age to White, and served as her playmates. Years later, White became the supreme basileus of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority (AKA). In this role, she sought to involve the entire membership of the sorority in philanthropic work, including fundraising for African American charities and helping build schools. White reflects upon her proudest moments as supreme basileus, including the induction of her granddaughter into AKA; and describes her hopes for the organization in the 21st century.

Norma White’s mother, Ruth Alma Cummings Solomon, was the first member of her family to attend college. She studied for two years at the Florida Memorial College in Miami Gardens, before completing her degree at the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College for Negroes in Tallahassee; and later obtained a master’s degree from Columbia University in New York City. White’s father, dry cleaner Gilbert Solomon, was born in 1908 in Birmingham, Alabama, and had three sisters. He met White’s mother after moving to Jacksonville, Florida, where White was raised. Although she never met her where White was raised. Although she never met her paternal grandmother, Emma Solomon, White was close to her paternal grandfather, Eddie Solomon, who worked on the railroad and as a part-time minister at Jacksonville’s West Union Baptist Church. There, all of White’s family were members of the congregation, except her father, who never formally joined the church, and stopped attending services after being insulted by the church officials.
