Will Gunn describes his family's background. Gunn's mother, Elizabeth Reese Gunn, was born on March 29, 1941 in Birmingham, Alabama. Her parents, Lula McCurdy Reese worked as a domestic, and her father, Stewart Reese, moved to Birmingham in 1920, to work in the mines, a steel mill, and later as a handyman and a yard man. Gunn's father, Willy Julian Gunn, was born on September 20, 1937, in Opelika, Alabama. He attended Darden High School, and then went on to attend Miles College near Birmingham. Gunn's parents met in Birmingham, and got married after his mother gave birth to him at the age of seventeen. His brother, Demetrius, was born in 1960, and soon after, the family moved to Fort Lauderdale, where his father took a job as a teacher at Dillard High School. Gunn's mother completed high school later in her life, and spent her career in social services. Gunn talks about Lowndes County, Alabama, and describes his likeness to his parents, his family's summer road trip in 1967, and his earliest childhood memories.

Will Gunn attended Piper High School in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, where he played basketball. He discusses his height, his interest in basketball, and his experience on his high school team. Gunn talks about his academics in high school, where he continued to stay involved in student government and even became the president of the student council during his senior year. During high school, Gunn read an advertisement about the ROTC programs at armed service academies, which sparked his desire to apply to an ROTC program in college. He talks about his interest in applying to colleges such as Howard University and George Washington University. He also applied to the U.S. Air Force Academy, where he was pursued by a recruiter. Gunn talks about his decision to join the Academy when he graduated from high school in 1976. He also recalls following the Watergate hearings on television, further piquing his interest in a career in law.

In 1976, Will Gunn was accepted into the U.S. Air Force Academy where he began his studies there three weeks after graduating from Piper High School in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He describes his experience there, talks about his mentors, and the influence of two instructors in particular: General Malham Wakin and Captain Curtis Martin. Gunn began to play a game called Flicker Ball at the Academy, and was recruited onto the Wing Championship Flicker Ball Team in his freshman year. While at the Academy, Gunn decided against a career as an Air Force pilot, and instead decided to pursue the Air Force Judge Advocate General's (JAG) Corps. He talks about careers in the Air Force besides that of a pilot. Gunn also talks about his academics at the Air Force Academy, playing basketball briefly, and becoming the class president during his sophomore year there.
