Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

Bank executive and United States ambassador Dwight L. Bush, Sr. was born on February 4, 1957 in St. Louis, Missouri to Charlie and Jessie Bush. He was raised in East St. Louis, Illinois, and attended Clark Junior High School and East St. Louis High School. He graduated from Cornell University in 1979 with his B.A. degree in government and economics.

Upon graduation, Bush joined Chase Manhattan Bank as a trainee in the management development program, and went on to become the bank's first African American managing director. His tenure at Chase included international corporate banking assignments in Latin America, Asia and the Middle East, and corporate finance and project finance in New York and Washington, D.C. In 1994, he was named vice president of corporate development and chief credit officer of Sallie Mae, where he served until 1997. From 1998 to 2006, Bush worked as a principal at Stuart Mill Capital, LLC; vice president and chief financial officer at SatoTravel Holdings, Inc.; and vice chairman at Enhanced Capital Partners, LLC.

In 2002, Bush founded D.L. Bush & Associates, a financial advisory and private investment firm located in Washington, D.C., where he serves as managing partner and president. Bush then helped establish Urban Trust Bank in 2004, and went on to serve as president and CEO of Urban Trust Bank, Urban Trust Holdings and president of UTB Education Finance, LLC from 2006 until 2008. On August 1, 2013, Bush was nominated by President Barack Obama to serve as the United States Ambassador to the Kingdom of Morocco; and, in March of 2014, the U.S. Senate confirmed the appointment.

Bush was appointed a director of EntreMed Inc. in 2004, and was named vice chairman in 2010. He has also served on the boards of the GAVI Alliance, Cornell University, The Vaccine Fund, ICBC Broadcast Holdings Inc., The Georgetown Day School, and The National Symphony Orchestra. He served on the boards of directors of Urban Trust Bank Holdings, UTB Education Finance, LLC, U.S. Education Finance, LLC, and Urban Cableworks. In addition, Bush was a director of JER Investors Trust Inc., and a member of The White House Fellows Selection Committee.

Bush is married to Antoinette Cook Bush, executive vice president and global head of government affairs at News Corp. They have two children: Dwight Bush, Jr. and Jacqueline Bush.

The Honorable Dwight Bush, Sr. was born on February 4, 1957 in St. Louis, Missouri to Jessie Mae Bush and Charlie W. Bush. His maternal family was descended from southern sharecroppers. Bush's mother was one of thirteen children born to Mary Bell Mitchell and Doc Heavens in Fairfield, Alabama. As a young child, she moved with her family to Columbus, Mississippi, where she met Bush's father. The two later reconnected and married in St. Louis, Missouri. They settled in the nearby town of East St. Louis, Illinois, where Bush's father worked the night shift as a crane operator at Cerro Copper and Brass Company and his mother worked as a cook. Due to his parents' long work hours, Bush was often left in the care of his older siblings. Bush talks about the manufacturing and meat packing industries in East St. Louis, as well as the city's prominent residents, including movie producers Reginald Hudlin and Warrington Hudlin, football player Kellen Winslow and U.S. Ambassador Donald F. McHenry.

The Honorable Dwight Bush, Sr. began his education at Park Elementary School in East St. Louis, Illinois, where he developed his love of learning. From an early age, Bush was mentored by the local funeral director, Lee Russell, and a precinct committeeman named Dupree Davis, while his father, Charlie W. Bush, worked overtime to provide for the family. Bush went on to attend George Rogers Clark Junior High School and East St. Louis Senior High School. At fifteen years old, he began working at Stouffer's Riverfront Inn and the Uptown Drug Store in St. Louis, Missouri. Bush also played basketball, football and baseball. He was one of the top students in his class, and considered attending the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign or Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois. Ultimately, he decided to enroll at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York at the recommendation of his coach, Roosevelt Wilson. While there, he met students from all around the world. He also talks about the impact of the Vietnam War.
