Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

Father Darryl F. James was born on July 3, 1954 in Bridgeport, Connecticut to Laurayne Farrar James and Anthony James, Sr. His family grew up in both Richmond, Virginia and Spring Valley, New York. He earned his B.A. degree from Howard University in 1975, and his M.Div. degree from Yale University in 1979.

Upon graduation from Yale Divinity School, James was assigned to Trinity Cathedral in Newark, New Jersey, where he worked under the tutelage of Dean Dillard Robinson. He was then ordained as a deacon in 1984 at St. Matthew's and St. Joseph's Church, where he was also appointed Assistant for Youth and Young Adult Ministries. In 1985, James was ordained to the priesthood by the Reverend John M. Burgess in Detroit, Michigan. Later that year, James became the rector of the Messiah-St. Bartholomew Church in Chicago, Illinois, where he remained for twenty-one years. James was subsequently named to the Chicago School Board, serving from 1990 to 1995. Also in 1990, he was named the National President of the Union of Black Episcopalians. James then moved to leadership of the historic Grace Episcopal Church in Jamaica, Queens as Priest-in-Charge in 2007. Three years later, he assumed the role as church rector. A member of the Diocese of Long Island and the Queens community, James also joined the Investment Committee and the Episcopal Health Service Board of Managers, and co-founded the Downtown Jamaica Clergy. He later served as president of the Queens Federation of Churches. James launched several initiatives at Grace Episcopal Church, including the Bishop Thompson, Jr. Summer Music and Arts Workshop, the annual Father's Day Men of Valor Luncheon, and the Volunteers Appreciation Dinner, among others. In 2005, James, in partnership with St. Luke's Episcopal Church, assisted Hurricane Katrina victims in New Orleans, Louisiana, providing aid and performing mission work in the region. He also participated in a pilgrimage to Northern India, visiting the Diocese of Mumbai and North India in Delhi. James also sponsored college tours for prospective college students throughout the United States.

Video Oral History Interview with Father Darryl F. James, Section A2016_125_001_001, TRT: 1:29:43 2016/12/13

Father Darryl F. James was born on July 3, 1954 in Bridgeport, Connecticut to Laurayne Farrar James and Anthony James, Sr. His maternal grandmother, Alice Whiting Farrar, was born in Virginia, and moved at a young age to the majority-white town of Bridgeport. There, she married James' maternal grandfather, Edward Farrar, who moved from Virginia to work for the Bridgeport Brass Company. They married and raised seven children in Bridgeport, including James' mother. James' paternal family originated in Richmond, Virginia, where his great-grandmother, Fannie James, worked for Maggie Lena Walker, who founded the city's first black bank. She also raised three daughters, including James' paternal grandmother, who married a postal worker. They raised James' father in Richmond, and he went on to study physical education at Virginia State College in Petersburg. During the summer, he served as the athletic director of the all-black Camp Atwater in North Brookfield, Massachusetts.

Father Darryl F. James' parents met and married in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and later moved to a predominantly black neighborhood in Richmond, Virginia. There, James grew up in the Brookfield Gardens apartments, where his neighbors included the civil rights lawyer Spottswood William Robinson III. His mother was the local coordinator for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and worked on the Poor People's Campaign. James began his education at the all-black Albert V. Norrell Elementary School in Richmond. After the local schools were integrated, he was sent to J.E.B. Stuart Elementary School, and then attended J.A.C. Chandler Junior High School. Each week, James rode his bicycle to St. Philip's Episcopal Church. He was confirmed as a member of the church at twelve years old, and soon became interest in joining the clergy. James completed his freshman year at Armstrong High School, and then moved with his family to Spring Valley, New York, where he attended the majority-Jewish Ramapo High School.

Father Darryl F. James enrolled at Howard University in 1972. He studied political science and joined the Absalom Jones Student Association, an Episcopal organization led by Father E. Nathaniel Porter. Through the group, he witnessed the church's efforts to serve the black community, and was inspired to join the ministry. Upon graduating, James enrolled at the Absalom Jones Theological Institute in Atlanta, Georgia and met Bishop John Burgess, who recruited him to study at the Yale Divinity School in 1977. While there, James challenged his white classmates' prejudice, and was mentored by the black theologian James H. Cone. James completed his Episcopal training the Berkeley Divinity School in New Haven, Connecticut. From 1979, he served as a lay assistant at the Trinity and St. Philip's Cathedral in Newark, New Jersey, and then moved to St. Matthew's-St. Joseph's Episcopal Church in Detroit, Michigan. He also remembers Bishop Barbara Harris' election as the first female Episcopal bishop in 1989.

Father Darryl F. James was ordained as a deacon at St. Matthew's-St. Joseph's Episcopal Church in Detroit, Michigan. The congregation was led by Reverend Orris G. Walker, Jr., who later became the first black bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Long Island. With his guidance, James learned to preach sermons extemporaneously, and went on to be ordained into the priesthood. He was also active in Detroit's Church Army, which provided services to unwed mothers. In 1985, James was recruited to pastor the predominantly black Messiah-St. Bartholomew Episcopal Church in Chicago, Illinois. There, he started a Christmas toy drive and a mentorship program for young men, where he emphasized etiquette and grooming. After twenty years, James was recruited by Reverend Orris G. Walker, Jr. to head the Grace Episcopal Church in Queens, New York, which had a predominantly West Indian congregation. At this point, James talks about the spiritual foundation of his priesthood.

Father Darryl F. James served a congregation of over three hundred people as head priest of the Grace Episcopal Church in Queens, New York. In that role, James presided over sacraments like baptisms and marriages, and maintained the church edifice and cemetery, which were over three hundred years old. He also founded a youth program called New Grace Ministries, where he encouraged younger congregants to become active members of the church. During this time, James served as the national president of the Union of Black Episcopalians, which advocated for the inclusion of the church's minority members. During the presidential campaign of 2016, James started a voter registration drive and encouraged his congregation to vote. At this point in the interview, James reflects upon his life and legacy, as well as his advice to young African Americans interested in joining the ministry. He concludes the interview by narrating his photographs.
